PLAYING THE GAME

It is appropriate as the school year gets underway, and football leads off among the school sports to hit the front pages during the nine-month period, to point out to players and fans that sportsmanship is more important than winning.

Winning in sports is, however, important. The winning spirit is something that American competitors have always exhibited and without a few victories one suspects that spirit is lacking. Thus the will to win and the willingness to persist, and the determination to achieve a goal, all are part of winning.

Winning is not so important, either in sports or in life, that one should place it above all other values. The individual or team which must resort to fouls or unethical recourses is not the winner. And one thing which should be kept in mind by footballers especially — because of the great pressure that the adult fan brings to bear concerning this sport — is that football records and achievements mean relatively less in after-school life.

The great values to be gained in high school or college are an education, the art of getting along with people and general experience, maturity and self sufficiency. A few years from now few people will remember the score of that "big game."

Thus, if it takes something unfair, unclean, or unsportsmanlike to win—forget it. High school or college is, first of all, a place for young minds to be educated. We hope more and more youngsters will participate in sports. We hope that they will play as hard as they can to win, and develop the will to persevere and go on to victory. This is one thing about sports that really is education—although not in the headlines.

TWO CRISES ARE UPON US

Perhaps two of the greatest crises which are confronting the State Department, in the tense cold war with communism, concern the Quemoy Islands and Jordan.

To the west, which we call the Far East, the communists have been shelling the Quemoy Islands in record intensity. Chinese Nationalist leaders on the island are not sure whether this is the prelude to an actual assault or not.

The delicate part of this situation is the presence of Americans on Quemoy, and our positive commitment to the defense of Formosa. The American involvement would present alarming situations. But, if as is suspected in some quarters, that the communists are really after political concessions and are using the threat of a real fight for Formosa as a means of gaining U. N. admission, etc., then we are once again involved in difficult decisions.

On the other side of the world, in Jordan, King Hussein is reported to have held out the olive branch to President Nasser, of Egypt. President Nasser's reply is supposed to have been: "Why should I deal with a dead duck?" If reports from the Middle East are true, King Hussein is holding on by the thinnest of margins. Once the two thousand British paratroopers who are now in Jordan are withdrawn, one wonders whether Hussein can stand up under the pressure being exerted against his regime by the pro-Nasser and the pro-communist forces in Jordan.

RUSSELL AND JOHNSON

Senator Richard Russell, titular leader of the Southerners in the Senate, has gone on record as saying that Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson may still be the best bet of the South for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1960.

One must examine this statement carefully to understand what it means. In the first place, Senator Russell is supposedly bitterly disappointed over Johnson's behavior toward the South in the just-concluded 85th Congress. Johnson fell over himself backwards, forwards and sideways to please the so-called leftwing liberals" of the North. The Southerners are not happy over the partnership with these Northerners. And with the trend swinging stronger by the hour towards a fabulous Democratic victory at the polls in 1960, as well as in the Congressional elections this November, it could possibly be that Senator Russell realizes that the party "liberals" will be more militant than ever, and it may be that the Southerners will have to "go along" with the Texan Majority Leader. Save for their age, Senator Russell and/or Senator Byrd would be the Southerner's choice for 1960. And it is entirely possible that some Southerners are going to start asking: What's wrong with Gov. Faubus?

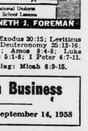
God In Business

Lesson for September 14, 1958

WHERE can we find God? In church, yes; in the great out-of-doors, yes. In prayer in the quiet room, or under the mighty far-off stars. God is everywhere.

But is God in business? We don't mean, is God doing business? He always is, of course. We mean, is God in the business life of our time? Is he on the stock exchange, is he in attendance at board meetings of great corporations, is he in the little country stores, is he in horse trades or on used-car lots? "The Economy" is a phrase used so often nowadays that even teen-agers must know in general what it means. "The Economy" is today's jargon for all the financial doings that keep our industrial and agricultural wheels going, the word includes those four pillars of all business anywhere any time: production, marketing, accounting and finance. Is God in the economy of America?



Dr. Foreman

Simple Honesty

Now it might be that not a reader of this column is a "business man." For all that, every reader is engaged in business some way or other part of the time. "Money isn't everything, but money's into everything." If we live, breathe and eat groceries, we are connected, more or less, with the vast web of buying, selling, owning, renting, earning, spending (yes and wasting, which is economics gone mad), all of which we lump together under the head of "The Economy" or just "economic life." Let us think not of something big, something a congressman might plan for. Let us think of economics on Main Street at the supermarket, on the bus, maybe our few dollars at the bank. Let's forget about the hundred dollar bills and think about small change.

Are we honest about all these things? Does our religion affect the way we price what we have to sell (if only a few eggs or bales of hay)? Do we make honest statements about what we buy and sell? The command of God is: "Thou shalt not steal." Nothing said about "Thou shalt not steal a whole lot," or "Thou shalt not steal unless thou canst get by with it"! Taking any kind of advantage of any other person (or corporation, for that matter) so that they are the poorer for what you did, is stealing.

Is it a sin to be rich?

There are so many condemnations of rich people in the Bible, that some readers of it have the impression that God condemns rich people just because they are rich. This is not true. A more careful reading shows that whenever a wealthy person is denounced in the name of God, is isn't because of his wealth, by itself. There are too many highly-praised persons of wealth in the Bible to allow us to believe that wealth is a sin, period. The point is not: How much do you have? or, What is the amount, in dollars, which is the limit a good Christian can have? The point is: How did you get what you have? Jesus' brother James calls down doom on certain rich farmers, not because they had money but because their wealth was gained by underpaying their hired men. Making money by making men poor is stealing, and sin.

Is this spirit possible?

Saint Peter gives us what is better than a rule: he tells us the right kind of spirit that a Christian ought to have. Our gifts, he writes, are to be employed "for one another;" service is to be rendered in such as to glorify God. We all feel that this is the right spirit for "church work." But is it practicable to take this same spirit into business, into our economic life? Is it possible, in business transactions, to serve one another for the glory of God? This is a vital question. If we have to say No, it is not practicable, then we are saying that we can be Christian only in our leisure time, not our workingtime. If we want to live as Christians around the clock, throughout the week, then we shall have to think out ways in which we can carry this spirit of devotion to God and man into the dollars-and-cents world. Can it be done? Each reader is challenged to make the experiment.

KNOW THE WEATHER

By E. H. Sims

Does the sun have much to do with our weather — other than heating the earth and bodies of water?

Yes, it is generally agreed now, among the experts that the sun affects our weather to a remarkable degree. Not all of the relationship is understood.

But is known that the mere heating of the earth and bodies of water is but one of the many influences the sun controls. The sun is thought to be the key to trends of weather on earth, a cycle of cold weather, or warm, which may cover decades, or scores of years. The sun has low pressure, or storm areas moving around its surfaces, and these may partially control our weather.

Of course, the sun's heating power is the source of clouds, and moisture—as a result of clouds.

Four-year-old Goliath, 43 pounds short of a ton, three or four times. This was enough for him. He turned and fled.

At last report the chase was going in a field distant from a zoo.
